Joanne Ferraro's study of spousal struggles in Venice between 1564 and 1650 uses newly available archives to great advantage. Her insistent and recurrent theme is the ability that women, and very occasional men, had to change their lives through the judicial processes on marital unions offered by the Venetian Patriarchs' Court.

Giovanna Garzoni (1600–1670) was an Italian painter of the Baroque period. She began her career painting religious, mythological, and allegorical subjects but gained fame for her botanical subjects painted in tempera and watercolour. Her works were praised for their precision and balance and for the exactitude of the objects depicted. She was often called the Chaste Giovanna due to her vow ...
